

Image Caption Form

General Harold Holesinger

Part of the Abraham Lincoln Presidential Library
Veterans Remember Oral History project

Interview on April 1, 2008
Interview # VRK A-L-2008-016

The Holesinger boys with their father, circa 1945. From left to right are Harold, Raymond, his father Otto, Kenneth and Edwin. (Narrator's photo)

Harold in 1945. Narrator's photo.

Even as a youngster, Harold dreamed of flying. That's Harold behind the pilot of a plywood airplane in 3rd grade. (Narrator's photo)

Harold during his pilot training in 1952. This image is considered to be in the public domain.

Lieutenant Holesinger's commissioning photo in September 1952, following his completion of flight school. This image is considered to be in the public domain.

The 49th Fighter Bomber Wing (later the 474th Fighter Bomber Wing), in Korea. Joe Lehargo??, the unit's commander is in the front center. This image is considered to be in the public domain.

An F-84 Thunderjet of the type Holesinger flew in Korea. (Narrator's photo)

Dee (Haynes) and Harold Holesinger on their wedding day in 1957. (Narrator's photo)

Colonel Holesinger while he served in Chicago as the commander of the 126th Air Refueling Wing circa 1978. (Narrator's photo)

Holesinger enjoys himself during survivor training in Wisconsin. This image is considered to be in the public domain.

Colonel Holesinger and others meet with Governor Dan Walker (1973-1977). Major General Patton is on the left. Holesinger is in the center, back. This image is considered to be in the public domain.

Holesinger, on the left, meets with President Gerald Ford. This image is considered to be in the public domain.

The Morris Daily Herald announces the appointment of General Holesinger as the state's new Adjutant General in 1983. Source citation is provided.

Major General Holesinger's official Adjutant General portrait. This image is considered to be in the public domain.

Holesinger meets with Army National Guard troops at their annual training (summer camp) at Fort McCoy, Wisconsin. Images in this collection are considered to be in the public domain.

General Holesinger awards Governor Jim Thompson with an award. From left to right are an unidentified Sergeant Major, Brigadier General Tom Napolitan, the governor, General Holesinger, Brigadier General Don Lynn, and Command Sergeant Major Larry Pence. This image is considered to be in the public domain.

General Holesinger takes part in a congo line at a National Guard convention. This image is considered to be in the public domain.

Holesinger is just off-camera to the right in this receiving line for President Ronald Reagan. Governor Thompson stands behind Nancy Reagan while Brigadier General Walt Vartan shakes the president's hand and Major General John Phipps, then Adjutant General, stands at right. This image is considered to be in the public domain.

Holesinger meets with singer Lee Greenwood in the early 1990s. This image is considered to be in the public domain.

General Holesinger meets with President George H.W. Bush. This image is considered to be in the public domain.

Holesinger shares a salute with Governor Jim Edgar at his retirement ceremony. This image is considered to be in the public domain.

Harold Holesinger in 2008, at the time of the interview. (Narrator's photo)