DCFS Guardian appointed to Director's Office

On September 30, Governor Quinn appointed D. Jean Ortega-Piron to serve as acting Director at DCFS, following the resignation of Erwin McEwen.

Ortega-Piron may be a familiar name to caregivers. Since 1996 she has been the named Guardian for all children committed to DCFS care by Illinois' juvenile courts. Her signature is on everything from the consent forms for medical treatment to orders finalizing adoptions.

As the Deputy Director for Guardian and Advocacy, she was the person legally responsible for children in care. During her tenure as Guardian, she with UIC/Clinical Services in Pharmacology established a system for monitoring psychotropic medications for youth in care that the Chicago Tribune described as the "gold standard" in the country. In a first for a child welfare agency, she was instrumental in establishing a Memorandum of Understanding between DCFS and Mexico to address unique circumstances. She has also served as the DCFS chief administrative law judge and administrator of the Appeals and Hearings Unit.

"I am no stranger to DCFS. As the Acting Director, I will continue to insure that we provide high quality child welfare services to children and their families," said Ortega-Piron.

D. Jean Ortega-Piron

Before joining DCFS as Guardian, Ortega-Piron worked as chief legal counsel for the Illinois Department of Mental Health and Developmental Disabilities. Coupled with her extensive time as a member of the DCFS executive team, she feels ready to continue to protect children and serve families in this new role.

Holiday happenings can bring both joy and pain for youth in care

Caregivers often strive to make the season bright for children, but that can backfire when a child is affected by trauma. It is important for everyone involved to keep the communication "open and often" around the holiday season. With realistic expectations, reasonable compromises and emotional support, the holidays can indeed be happy.

When a child is separated from his or her parents during Thanksgiving or Christmas, that longing or disappointment may come out in negative attitudes, regressive behaviors or bad memories. Most of the time the child is not aware of the emotional changes or the reasons for them. Even if she or he could put a finger on the problem, managing the flare-up may be beyond what they can handle. That is when the adults have to step in to provide an extra layer of support. Caregivers should recognize that even a "picture-perfect" day might not compete with the ingrained memories and traditions of a child's family home. Even if the past holidays didn't come close to the ideal, they still have a powerful place in a child's personal history and are valid and important.

To tip the scales in favor of joyful holiday memories while in foster care, the grown-ups have to do some advance planning for more than just the gift list. Caregivers can talk about possible reactions to the holidays with the child's caseworker or counselor. Ideally the parents can offer insight, as well. In the best of scenarios, the foster family and the child's family can find a way to bridge the separate households. Together they can plan the visits, arrange phone calls or handoff presents. There won't be one right way to handle this complicated situation, but there can be a solution that makes sense, given the circumstances. When children see the adults who are important in their lives cooperating and respecting each other's role, there can be less loyalty conflict and anxiety. With less stress, youth have a better chance at expressing their feelings appropriately. Then caregivers can also spend less time de-escalating situations and more time wrapping presents and basting the turkey.

Following are a few ideas to consider that can pave the way for a happy holiday season. Think about and talk about what could make sense for the children in your home.

Talk about holiday traditions from the child's memory and find ways to incorporate them into your plans

Make a plan for a visit or phone call with the parents during the holiday break

Help children create and mail holiday cards or letters for their parents or siblings who are not together

Understand and support the child's need for loyalty to his family

Take a picture of the foster family, including the caregivers and any birth children to display with holiday decorations

At a visit, snap a photo of the child and her parent. Display it at your home and frame a print as a gift

Host an overnight sibling visit while school is out

New law allows schools to have epi-pens for allergy emergencies

Recent studies suggest that one in 13 children are affected by food allergies. Nearly 40 percent of children with food allergies have a history of severe reaction, and 30 percent are allergic to multiple foods. The most common food allergen is peanuts, followed by milk and shellfish.

Governor Pat Quinn in August signed legislation to increase access to potentially life-saving medicine for children with severe allergies. House Bill 3294, the School Access to Emergency Epinephrine Act, allows schools to stock and use epinephrine auto-injectors (often known as "epi-pens") in the case of life-threatening allergic reactions.

Previously, students with severe allergies could carry their own personally-prescribed epi-pen at school and could allow specific school personnel to administer it in case of emergency. However, schools were prohibited from administering epinephrine auto-injectors to children that had forgotten their epi-pens or to children that had never been diagnosed with a severe allergy. Instead schools were required to dial 911, potentially losing key moments during a life-threatening reaction.

"When a child suffers a severe allergic reaction, every second counts," Governor Quinn said. "With food allergies on the rise, we take action to help children with dangerous allergies. This law allows our schools to be prepared and for school nurses to take the immediate action that could save a child's life."

Caregivers should continue to make sure children have their own epi-pens with them. With the new law, they can know that there is now another option in case of an emergency at school.

MOVIN' ON UP: As youth transition to adulthood

Youth take charge on advisory councils

The Statewide Youth Advisory Board (SYAB) works closely with DCFS to provide their peers information about resources, opportunities, policies, and programs that affect all youth in care. The SYAB is “committed to youth empowerment, development, leadership, and achievement across the state of Illinois.”

The heart of the statewide board lies in the regional boards: Southern, Central, Northern and Cook County regions. Each region has five executive board members who serve also on the Statewide Youth Advisory Board.

Every year the SYAB discusses the youth-related issues and concerns within each region. Then the board votes on the initiatives to address in the current year. In 2011 the board focused on education and stability, legislation, pregnant and parenting teens, and recruitment/retention.

The advisory boards are open to youth age 14-21 who are in DCFS care or who moved to adoption or guardianship. The SYAB hopes that caregivers will encourage youth to get involved in this leadership opportunity. The organizations that support the boards also assist in transportation with advance notice.

Holidays are the right time to bring siblings together for a visit

The holidays are a good time to plan extended visits with siblings who are in different foster care homes. Visits can often soften the traumatic impact of separation and contribute to siblings' long-term mental health. DCFS recognizes the power of sibling connections and will provide foster caregivers assistance and payment as they do their part to facilitate visits.

Visitation requirements

DCFS rules require that sibling visits among youth in DCFS care occur at least two times a month for a minimum of two hours each for all siblings placed apart. Exceptions to twice-monthly visits include:

- A court order requiring less frequent or no visitation
- Requests by the child for less frequent or no visitation (requires regular counseling)
- Risk of physical, emotional or mental harm from the visit (requires documentation)

If siblings are in residential care or are placed more than 150 miles apart, visits may be less frequent. However, visitation may not be reduced based on the unavailability of a visit supervisor or as a form of discipline.

These requirements only apply to youth in DCFS care. After adoption, visitation is still an important factor for the adoptive family to consider, but it is not mandated or reimbursed by DCFS. The adoptive parents have to determine what will work best for the children and families involved.

Foster caregivers who help children have visits with their siblings in foster care can be reimbursed for supervising the visits and providing transportation. A caregiver who hosts an overnight or weekend visit in their home can be reimbursed $100 for supervising the visit, one time a month. Supervising shorter visits is reimbursed at $25 an hour for up to four hours each month. Driving a child to or from a visit is also eligible for reimbursement at the rate of $0.51 per mile (as of July 1). The maximum reimbursement for travel each month is capped at $50.

The child's caseworker can help foster caregivers complete the form (CFS 315) for reimbursement.

Illinois Statewide Foster Care Advisory Council Bulletin

The Statewide Foster Care Advisory Council did double-duty for the September meeting. The regularly scheduled meeting began at 3:00 p.m., rather than in the morning. This was to accommodate the evening arrival of the Statewide Youth Advisory Board. Even with the adjusted schedule there was still a full agenda, covering several timely topics.

Many members were concerned about changes to list of psychotropic medications that would be approved for payment with the state medical card. Some spoke from personal experience and some on behalf of other caregivers. Lisa Arndt of the Department of Healthcare and Family Services came to explain the reasons for the changes. The Council also inquired about a change to end payment for certain over-the-counter products previously covered by the medical card. Members voted to form a committee to swiftly review the implications to caregivers and weigh in with comments.

The Statewide Foster Care Advisory Council was founded in conjunction with the Illinois Foster Parent Law. Membership consists of caregivers, agency representatives and other experts in child welfare, who are appointed by the DCFS Director. The mandated positions for caregivers are spread among the DCFS regions.

The council holds open meetings at least six times a year, and more as needed, in locations around the state.

Janice Hopson

Doreen Henry

After an evening of more robust discussion, new members Doreen Henry and Janice Hopson felt thoroughly initiated. Hopson will represent Cook Central and Henry fills the post for a caregiver to serve jointly on the Child Welfare Advisory Council.

The next meeting of the Statewide Foster Care Advisory Council will be on January 20 at 9 a.m. in Springfield. Call the Office of Caregiver and Parent Support at 217-524-2422 for details.

Foster parent council meets with youth advisory board to discuss joint concerns

The foster care council adjourned the September business meeting at 7 p.m. and welcomed members of the Statewide Youth Advisory Board (SYAB) and their support staff. The adults of the foster care council shared dinner and networked with the young people of the statewide youth board before the councils officially opened their joint meeting around 8 p.m.

Members of both groups introduced themselves then they eagerly participated an "icebreaker" activity that inspired everyone to get up and move around the room, intent on finding their assigned partner and getting to know one another before reporting out what they just learned. By design, adults were partnered with youth.

Getting down to business meant breaking into four regional groups to discuss ideas and strategies for increasing the number of youth who participate in the youth board program. The discussions were lively as the groups quickly jumped into discussions and brainstormed.

Each group reported their ideas, while a young person recorded the ideas for future use. The SWYAB agreed to transcribe the ideas of each group and send them to the foster care council chair. Both groups will work on the activities assigned to them, and all agreed to continue the tradition of meeting together every September.

Families and the Governor celebrate Adoption Month in Illinois

The Illinois Adoption Advisory Council joined with the adoption workers and other Cook County staff, for more than six months to plan every detail of the annual adoption celebration. The event was held Saturday, November 19 at the DCFS Cook South regional office on Emerald Street in Chicago. For nearly 100 adoptive parents and their children, the day proved to be an important learning and networking experience with some fun.

WHEREAS, adoption is a rewarding and enriching experience for individuals and couples who want to provide children with a stable, loving family environment; and,

WHEREAS, Illinois is recognized as a national leader in finding permanent homes for waiting children, placing more than 52 thousand foster children into adoptive and subsidized guardianship homes since 1997; and,

WHEREAS, largely because of its success in adoption recruitment, Illinois has become the first state in the nation to support more children in permanent adoption guardianship placements than in substitute care; and,

WHEREAS, the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services, the Child Care Association of Illinois, the Adoption Information Center of Illinois, the Illinois Adoption Advisory Council, the Illinois Foster and Adoptive Parent Association, the Chicago Bar Association, and the many Illinois child welfare agencies and adoptive parent groups all encourage families to consider adopting a child in need of a home; and,

WHEREAS, hundreds of children in Illinois are still awaiting adoption; and,

THEREFORE, I, Pat Quinn, Governor of the State of Illinois, do hereby proclaim November 2011 as ADOPTION AWARENESS MONTH in Illinois, and encourage all families to consider adopting a child into their family.

In Witness Whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State of Illinois to be affixed.

DCFS adoption staff and other adoption experts provided presentations on the adoption process, post-adoption services and standby adoption. Caregivers could also choose from five different workshop topics ranging from educational resources to life books. The lunch break was designed to allow for networking and to view exhibits. The Heart Gallery displayed portraits of beautiful children who are seeking adoptive families. Professional photographers donated their time and expertise to highlight the youth.

Since the Cook County staff made arrangements to keep the children happy and busy, the adults had an opportunity to learn and make new friends. The day ended by reading the Adoption Month in Illinois proclamation from the Governor and enjoying plenty of cake. The Adoption Celebration all too quickly came to an end as adoptive parents re-claimed their children and left on a happy note filled with much new knowledge about adoption.

Unique program helps students work and complete high school

LaSalle County students have another option when they cannot complete their education in their home high schools. The Regional Work Study Program in Local Area Network (LAN) 27 can help. This program is open to any student that may be in foster care, moved to adoption or guardianship or living in the home of their parents. The program helps students get back on track educationally and provides work opportunities. The LaSalle County Regional Superintendent of Schools has been very supportive of this second chance. The students get assistance to re-enroll in high school, complete their GED or take courses at Illinois Valley Community College.

Among those who have benefitted are:

- A young mother who dropped out of Ottawa High School. She later received her high school diploma. With the help of the Business Employment Skill Team, she went to work at one of the local police departments.

- A young man who battles depression and grief issues stopped attending classes. Staff did outreach and encouraged him to return back to school.
- A teen had no place to live after he left LaSalle-Peru High School. He was unsuccessful in three alternative educational programs, with a history of truancy and suspensions. Now he never misses a class, lives with his grandparents and works two part time jobs. He graduated last May and has started classes at IVCC.

When a student hits a roadblock, success is still possible with the right support for them and their families. To refer a student to the Regional Work Study Program contact the youth's caseworker or Greg Hixon of DCFS at 217-779-2522.

In every Local Area Network (LAN), there are more programs to ensure academic success. To find out about community programs for all families, contact a DCFS LAN Liaison.

Customer service line for DCFS homes

The number for the DCFS Central Region Foster Parent Customer Service Line is 866/368-5204.

This toll-free line is operational Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., excluding state holidays. The line is equipped with voice mail. The goal is to have a response time of 24 to 48 hours for all calls. This is not set up to be an emergency response line. If a caregiver has an urgent request, it is best to call the field office or the after-hours number.

The Customer Service Line is designed for calls from foster families whose licenses are supervised by DCFS Central Region. The calls can be about issues or concerns that caregivers have not been able to resolve through normal channels. Agency-supervised homes should work directly with the agency that monitors their license.

Central Region Caregiver Training

DCFS Office of Training has scheduled sessions of in-service training modules and other courses in locations across the Central Region. The listing below can help caregivers plan for their training needs. To get specific dates and locations, visit the on-line Virtual Training Center (VTC) anytime at www.DCFStraining.org or call the DCFS Office of Training at 877-800-3393 during regular business hours. In addition to classroom courses, caregivers can also take advantage of videos, books and online training.

Who Do You Call When....?

...A child in your home is having a psychiatric crisis that may require hospitalization? Call the CARES line at 800-345-9049. However, if a child is a danger to himself or others, call 911 first. The CARES line is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

...You want information on becoming a foster parent or on adoption? The Adoption Information Center of Illinois (AICI) can answer your questions and connect you with a licensing agency. The toll-free number is 800-572-2390. AICI also maintains information about the children who are featured on the back page of the newsletter.

...You have questions about your board check? Call the DCFS Central Payment Unit at 800-525-0499 if your check comes from DCFS. If your check comes from a private agency, contact the agency.

...You feel you aren’t being treated fairly by DCFS or a private agency? If you’ve already tried to resolve the issue by going up the chain of command with the caseworker and supervisors, then call the Advocacy Office at 800-232-3798.

...You have questions about your child’s medical card? Call 800-228-6533.

...You need to report a child missing or have information about a youth who has run away? To report information on missing youth call 866-503-0184. The toll-free number is available 24 hours a day every day of the week. If you feel the child is in danger, call 911 first.

...You are having extreme family problems with your adopted child? The Adoption/Subsidized Guardianship Preservation Program can provide in-home counseling and case services to help hold a family together. To find the program that serves your area call Cook County Post-Adoption/Guardianship Unit at 855-548-5505 or the subsidy worker in nearest DCFS regional office.

...You have an idea for an article in the newsletter? Each region has a regional reporter to help gather local news. The names and contact information are listed in the regional section of each edition. Or you can contact the Editor, Vanessa James, at 312-814-6824 or send an e-mail vanessa.james@illinois.gov.
