DCFS scholarship helps 48 students attend college

College comes with enough built-in stressors, ranging from grades to roommate conflicts to homesickness. The 48 recipients of the 2013 DCFS Scholarship won't have to add money concerns to that list. More than 200 students applied for the competitive scholarship that is open to youth who are currently in DCFS care or whose cases were closed through adoption or guardianship. The award includes a waiver of tuition and mandatory fees that they can use at one of the nine Illinois state universities or any Illinois junior college. It also provides a monthly stipend of $451 to offset other expenses, and students can continue the medical coverage.

"There is no way to put a value on how fortunate it is to be able to focus on learning without having to worry about how to pay for school," said Kethan Hedrick, a scholarship recipient in 2009 who is now in law school. He was one of two alumni featured speakers at a July luncheon to celebrate the awardees.

From the DCFS Director

Richard H. Calica

Dear Parents,

As foster parents, you have the difficult task of helping your foster children imagine what they would like to be when they grow up, understand what they have to do to get there, and acquire the skills necessary to live as independent adults. Children try out different roles/jobs as they develop. They also identify with those adults who are meaningful to them and try to emulate them. You need to help them express and imagine what their desired future looks like through many ages and phases. Whether you have a child for a month or several years, getting to know their hopes and fears and helping them to deal with them is part of what we expect of you. Giving them a sense of worth and a confident expectation that they can succeed in life is one of the most valuable gifts you can give a child.

Many foster children will not have natural families to rely on in later adolescence and young adulthood. Their abilities to: balance income and expenses; negotiate leases; take care of their homes, clothes and selves needs to come from YOU. Also, knowing how important and enjoyable school can be is part of what all children need help with. History, literature, mathematics and gym are all about defining and solving problems – personal, interpersonal, physical and computational. Discovering how others have solved problems and comparing that to how your child solves problems can be a wonderful adventure.

Thanks to foster parents like you, this year DCFS awarded 48 college scholarships to youth in or formerly in DCFS care out of hundreds of applicants. Their academic success, community service and student leadership make them shining examples to each and every one of us. Next year, we hope to double the number of scholarships and see the number of children attending college rise as well. With your continued love and devotion, and continued innovation from the department, we will do an even better job of making the dreams of every child a reality.

Have a great school year,

Richard H. Calica
Director

It took a lengthy and thorough review process to select 48 finalists, based on their academic achievements, community involvement and personal successes. Almost all of the recipients came to Chicago for the scholarship luncheon. They began the day with an overview of the scholarship program and instruction on how to make the most of their college experience. With that done, they enjoyed a meal shared with the family members, caseworkers and mentors who helped them reach this educational milestone. This event is one that the DCFS leadership always looks forward to attending. The Office of Youth and Family Development spends months preparing for a proper sendoff that included school supplies and items for living in the dorms. Now, the 48 scholars are embarking on their college journeys at more than two dozen different campuses.

The DCFS Youth in Scholarship Program is available to youth currently in DCFS care and to those who left department guardianship through adoption or private guardianship arrangements. The purpose of the program is to ensure that those selected have the opportunity to earn a bachelor's degree in four years or less. Scholarship Program Student Applications are routinely available in January with a deadline of March 31. Applicants must have a high school diploma or GED by the end of the current school year. Contact the Office Youth and Family Development at 312-814-5959 for more information.

DCFS Statewide Foster Care Advisory Council update

The Statewide Foster Care Advisory Council held its July meeting in Aurora. In addition to the standing items and updates, the council invited several speakers to discuss new initiatives that DCFS has launched.

Increasing Permanency

In the recent restructuring, there will be renewed emphasis on permanency. Julia Camacho-de-Monzon is heading the Permanency Initiative for DCFS. A group of specialized caseworkers will focus on doing “whatever it takes” to avoid cases getting stalled in foster care longer than federal guidelines. This could be assisting in completing the subsidy packet or navigating the legal screening process. The group will analyze regular reports on how many months children have been in care so they can track cases that need more assistance.

Measuring CIPP results

The council also offered its ideas about a new evaluation tool that is being designed by the Clinical Intervention for Placement Permanency (CIPP) program. Lee Annes explained that when a child’s placement may require a significant change in level of care or services needed, a CIPP staffing could help clarify the options. Going forward, the cases that have CIPP intervention will also incorporate an assessment of the family’s situation before the interventions and afterward. The council supported having an added layer of accountability and a means of measuring results.

Joint youth meeting in October

The Statewide Foster Care Advisory Council will meet with the Statewide Youth Advisory Board in October. The adult group will conduct its customary business starting in the afternoon, then the youth will arrive for the joint meeting that evening. The adult group will then continue their regular agenda the following day. Over the years of conducting joint meetings, the two groups find that they often have similar interests and find value in the ability to discuss different perspectives on a topic.

Improving adoption outcomes

Cheryl McIntyre, the statewide adoption administrator, briefed the group on changes that have been made to finalize adoptions. New adoption workers have had updated training. McIntyre described the intensive review process to track and intervene in cases that are not moving swiftly toward finalization. Even the logistics for mailing subsidy packets have been streamlined.

Add your input to new implementation plans

Each year the Statewide Foster Care Advisory Council must review each of the foster care programs’ Foster Parent Law Implementation Plans. The implementation plans must clearly describe how each foster care program upholds the foster parent rights and responsibilities outlined in the law.

The Foster Parent Law stipulates that the implementation plans demonstrate that caregivers participated in creating it. Typically DCFS and agencies announce meetings in the fall to discuss the previous plan and changes for the new plan, which is due to the council by November 30. The public period for review and comment is underway as of September. DCFS and private agency programs take any public input into consideration as they prepare the plans for 2013.

All caregivers can review the previous year’s plan. Some foster care programs mailed the plan to licensed homes. Others may have copies available at the administrative offices. If a foster caregiver needs more information about the actual plan or the process for drafting the new plan, each program has a Foster Parent Law liaison. The liaison is the primary contact for matters concerning the Law and how it is enacted at that agency or DCFS region.

The Statewide Foster Care Advisory Council was founded in conjunction with the Illinois Foster Parent Law. Membership consists of caregivers, agency representatives and other experts in child welfare, who are appointed by the DCFS director. The mandated positions for caregivers are spread among the DCFS regions.

The council holds open meetings at least six times a year, and more as needed, in locations around the state.

The next meeting of the Statewide Foster Care Advisory Council will be on October 18 in Urbana at 3 p.m. Call DCFS Caregiver and Parent Support at 217-524-2422 for details.

Relative caregivers gain more resources when licensed for foster care

Children who are not able to stay in their homes safely require love and protection, plus support specific to the trauma they are facing. If there is a family crisis that requires DCFS to step in, relatives are the first source asked to help. The children can gain support from the familiarity and the love that a family member can provide. Relative foster care is a critical part of the child welfare system, but it is often complicated. There can be difficult dynamics between family members that have to be sorted out. For several years, DCFS has made extra efforts to give relatives resources by encouraging them to become licensed. Licensed relatives caring for children placed with them by DCFS receive the benefits of more training and increased monthly payments to provide for children's needs. When relatives become licensed, DCFS also receives more federal money to use to support children and families.

In order to be licensed, relative caregivers can take a six-hour course in-class or use the DVD training course in their home. Training will help relative caregivers understand the developmental and emotional stages of the children in their care. By learning in advance what foster parenting can entail, they will be better able to handle the challenges that may come along. The training was designed specifically to reflect and address parenting situations from the perspective of a relative. Many substitute caregivers decide to go on and take the full 27-hour Foster PRIDE series of classes required to be a foster parent to non-related children.

When relative caregivers become licensed, they also become eligible for the foster care board rate. This monthly payment is typically higher than the "standard of need" rate for unlicensed relatives. For example, a great-aunt from Champaign providing care for her 11-year-old niece could receive $292 a month at the standard of need rate. After becoming licensed, she would receive $453 for the child's clothing, board and personal allowance.

Both DCFS and private agency caseworkers receive training on how to help unlicensed relatives become licensed. These relatives will have to comply with current licensing standards, including fingerprinting, medical exams and training. In some cases, workers can request waivers to allow an applicant to become licensed, even though they are not in full compliance with a specific licensing standard.

Taking care of a child during a family crisis that requires DCFS involvement is not an easy task. Becoming licensed will give these caregivers more educational and financial resources.

Resources for Older Relatives Caring for Children

Grandparents and older relatives over the age of 55 raising grandchildren/children are also eligible for services under the Illinois Family Caregiver Support Program.

The five basic services offered to caregivers include:

- Information about available services;
- Assistance accessing services;
- Individual counseling, support groups and caregiver training;
- Respite care to enable caregivers to be temporarily relieved from their caregiving responsibilities; and
- Supplemental services, on a limited basis, to complement the care provided by caregivers. Supplemental services can include assistive devices, home modification, legal assistance, transportation, school supplies and any other gap filling service which attempts to address a short-term caregiver emergency.

Complete the form for more than a free lunch

Among the many forms that schools require families to complete, one that is especially important is the application for free or reduced-price school meals (commonly referred to as the free lunch form). Funding from federal resources is often based on the number of students eligible for free or reduced-price lunch. Additionally, the income information from the applications can determine what programs a school may be able to offer.

Students who have an open DCFS case will automatically qualify for free meals. The form asks for a check mark “if a foster child (legal responsibility of welfare agency or court).” However, once a child moves to adoption, his or her case is closed and there is no longer an automatic qualification. Adoptive parents will have to complete the form with income information to determine if the family is eligible for free or reduced-price lunch based on income.

Some families choose not to apply, knowing their income will not be eligible. Still, it is important to write that on the form, sign it and return it. From the school’s perspective, every form counts when funding is at stake.

As one more reason to fill in the form, consider this warning. Some caregivers have reported that their child received meals at a reduced rate without a form, and then received a bill at the end of the year. The DCFS education advisors urge caregivers to return the forms promptly so they can take advantage of the benefits and avoid possible problems.

Fall flu season calls for flu vaccination

Getting the flu vaccination in October through December is the primary tool for preventing influenza. Most people over the age of five months can get the flu shot. Some of the symptoms associated with the flu are fever, headache, cough, sore throat, chills and fatigue. Some people are at higher risk of complications from having the flu, such as developing pneumonia. Those people who may be at higher risk for complications are children between six months and five years, pregnant women, people 50 years or older, and those with chronic illnesses.

The flu vaccination is available at no charge for children enrolled in Medicaid, children with no health insurance or children whose health insurance plans do not include vaccinations. For more information about the upcoming flu season, contact the Illinois Department of Public Health at 217-782-4977.

Illinois State Fair tradition continues

DCFS once again offered discounted tickets for entry, food and rides during the Illinois State Fair. DCFS provided $3 entry and other specials to more than 800 households. It is one way of showing appreciation to the families who are doing foster care or who have moved to adoption or guardianship.

Families in the Southern part of the state also received invitations to attend the Du Quoin State Fair. There, families enjoyed rides, lunch and a relaxing time with other families and DCFS support staff.

Attending the state fair in Springfield and in Du Quoin has become a long-standing tradition for foster, adoptive and guardianship families.

Tools to handle tricky school situations for adopted children

Parental instinct is to protect children from uncomfortable situations. Particularly in school, there are many things that could trigger confusion or hurt feelings for a child who comes to a family through adoption. While it is impossible to be everywhere all the time, there are proactive ways to manage sticky situations. For example, teachers may not realize how assignments like “family trees” to teach history or genetics can be complicated for a child who was adopted. Even a game to match baby pictures to the present-day snapshot could be difficult if the family doesn’t have a photo.

The magazine Adoptive Families addresses six of these typical, yet possibly sensitive assignments in a classic article available for reprint.

The article is called “Tackling Tricky Assignments.” It presents alternative means of accomplishing the teaching objectives, with flexibility around the adoption topic.

The topic of adoption in general is also likely to come up in class or on the playground. Adoptive Families also has suggestions for a letter parents might want to write to teachers in advance to explain or elaborate on their family. There is also a handout that could be distributed or discussed at home so children can prepare for how they can handle situations in a new school year.

These and more “clip and save” materials are online at www.adoptivefamilies.com.

Illinois Adoption Advisory Council Update

The Illinois Adoption Advisory Council meets six times a year with the mission to advise DCFS on all matters involving or affecting adoption and guardianship services. The council addresses ways to preserve and expand funding for post-adoption and adoption preservation services, and to improve the permanency outcomes for teens and other children.

The DCFS director appoints all council members. Membership includes adoptive parents and adopted persons, as well as experts in child welfare and adoption from DCFS and other agency partner organizations. All meetings are open.

ADOPTION DAY

Celebrating a Family for Every Child

Make plans now to celebrate adoption

This year on November 23, families and communities will be united around adoption. On that day, hundreds of judges, attorneys, adoption agencies, adoption professionals and child advocates will stand together on behalf of forever families for waiting children. Courts and communities across the country will open their doors on a Saturday to finalize thousands of adoptions of children from foster care and to celebrate all families who adopt.

In addition to finalizing adoptions, the community events throughout November can raise awareness about adoption and encourage others to adopt children waiting for families.

There are many ready-to-go resources that can help families prepare to celebrate adoption throughout the month. Individuals and organizations can plan events, letter-writing campaigns, community marches and countless other activities for November. The Illinois Adoption Advisory Council is planning a celebration and welcomes adoptive parents to get involved. ## A family for me: Call 1-800-572-2390 for more information

Angel (C7785)

Angel [7785] Angel, 10, is a creative, outgoing young lady. She loves chatting with her friends, participating in Girl Scouts and receiving one-on-one attention from adults. Although she is a social child, Angel is capable of playing independently and can always find ways to entertain herself. She likes to spend her free time singing, dancing and making up songs.

Angel's foster parent says she is a sweet, loving girl who is willing to help out around the house. She enjoys spending time with people, and likes to interact with guests whenever her foster family has company.

Timothy (C7982)

To be a forever family for Angel, you can provide lots of love and encouragement as she adjusts to your home. You can also support her when she expresses interest in organized group activities. Angel would like to have a mother who is a good cook and a father who is an expert at making ribs. Other children in the home should be older than Angel.

Timothy [7982] This young man is curious, inquisitive, and eager to engage adults in conversation. Timothy, 14, is developmentally delayed, but can still hold court on a wide variety of topics. Timothy seeks out adult attention, and does well in school when a teacher is able to work with him one-on-one. In his spare time, he enjoys collecting Pokémon and Bakugan cards, assembling KRE-O toys, and playing video games. He also likes spending time outside, and is particularly interested in fishing.

Timothy's worker says he can be funny, polite, and a good conversationalist. His helpers say he is able to form attachments and is open to showing affection. Timothy needs a loving, nurturing home. You can establish clear expectations and redirect his behavior when needed. You can also work with specialists who can help you understand and meet his educational needs. Timothy does not have a preference between a two-parent family and a single-parent family. Either way, he should be the only child in his adoptive home.

Vasha [7686] Vasha, 13, is a considerate child who likes helping others. She enjoys attending church, participating in Bible study and visiting with her relatives. She also enjoys singing, dancing and listening to music. She struggles with self-control at times, but usually responds well when supervised by consistent, responsible adults.

Vasha's teacher says she is a sweet girl who behaves well in school and tries hard to please others. Vasha's foster parent says she is capable of following rules and behaving appropriately in the home.

Potential parents for Vasha can be loving and supportive, while also providing clear expectations and regular supervision. Once Vasha is adopted, you can give her plenty of time to adjust to your home. You can also work closely with child welfare professionals to help meet Vasha's medical and emotional needs, and to encourage continued positive behavior. The ideal family would live in the St. Louis area and would help Vasha maintain relationships with her siblings and other members of her birth family.

[George & Reba 8028-29] George, 15, is an active young man who goes out of his way to help others. He enjoys hunting and farming, and often volunteers to help out on neighboring farms. His younger sister Reba, 14, is an outgoing young lady who enjoys spending time with her friends. She attends school sporting events regularly, and strives to succeed in everything she does. Both siblings benefit from an Individualized Education Program.

George's worker says he is a helpful young man who likes to get involved in many different projects. Reba's worker says she is a social young lady, and is full of life.

The forever family for these siblings can provide a loving, nurturing home environment. You can stress the importance of education, and make sure their academic needs are being met. You can also encourage George as he establishes his independence, and provide plenty of opportunities for Reba to interact with her peers. Both George and Reba would prefer living in a rural community.

George (C8028)

Reba (C8029)
